Yesterday I went to the library in my town. There were a lot of students. They were reading magazines, not books.

Today there are many young people who don't like reading books. They say that books have more words and fewer pictures than magazines. Do you think so?

When you read a book, you will find that the words in the book paint the picture for you. You can paint the pictures in your mind when you read. They may be more interesting than some of the pictures you see in magazines. When you read the same book again later, you will find something new and you will be able to imagine more scenes.

When you can imagine pictures painted with words, books will take you to any place — to old China, to the future, or even to the moon.

(注) scene = 光景

- ア Students should visit a library.
- イ You should read the same book many times.
- ウ Magazines have more pictures than books.

次の英文を読んで、1 から 5 までの問いに答えなさい。

Mary lived with old people. She lived in Koufukuen, a special home for old people. She arrived there about 15 years ago. She usually stayed in a big room but at night she slept in her own house in the home. Everyone in the home loved her very much.

Mr. Sato, the manager of the home, decided to keep Mary. Many people didn't like this idea. They said to him, "Keeping a dog will make the home dirty and someone will have to take care of her." But soon they noticed ① some changes in the home. Before Mary came, about half of the old people stayed in their beds all day. They didn't want to do anything. But after she came, these people got out of their beds and came to touch and talk to her. They enjoyed talking to her and talking with each other about her.

About 5 years ago, Mary died suddenly. The old people were sad and cried. Each of them brought a flower to thank her and to say good-bye. Mr. Sato says, "We were all very sad when Mary died. But it was a good chance for the old people to think about death. They knew they would die some day and they felt lonely. But now, after Mary's death ② they don't feel lonely, because they saw many people felt sad and cried for Mary. They understood that many people would feel sad and cry when they died, too."

What did Mary do for the old people? She didn't do anything special for them. She only walked and sat among the old people. She was always near them. ③ That was all Mary did. The old people enjoyed doing something for her. Mary wagged her tail happily when they touched and talked to her. The old people felt happy when she looked happy. Mary gave them the power to live actively. She was also happy to live with them. The old people and Mary needed each other.

We can live actively when we have someone or something near us. It may be animals, flowers or nature itself. Each of us also can give each other the power to live actively. Mary shows us what we should do. We can't live without each other.
