Yesterday I went to the library in my town. There were a lot of students. They were reading magazines, not books.

Today there are many young people who don't like reading books. They say that books have more words and fewer pictures than magazines. Do you think so?

When you read a book, you will find that the words in the book paint the pictures for you. You can paint the pictures in your head when you read. They may be more exciting than some of the pictures you see in magazines. When you read the same book later again, you will find something new and you will be able to imagine more scenes.

When you can imagine pictures painted with words, books will be interesting and take you to any place — to old China, to the future Africa, or even to the moon.

(注) fewer pictures = より少ない絵 (写真)

ア Students should visit a library.

イ You should read the same book many times.

ウ Magazines have more pictures than books.

エ It is fun to imagine many things by reading books.
