次の英文を読んで、1 ～ 5 の問いに答えなさい。

In science, one very important skill is careful observation. We can notice details that others might miss. Sometimes, things look the same on the outside, but if we look closely, they may be very different inside. Careful observation helps us understand the truth, not just the ideas we have. This skill is not only useful in science, but it is also important in everyday life, especially for doctors (①) must notice small signs in their patients. This story shows why observation is important.

A professor of medicine was about to give his first lesson to a group of students who wanted to become doctors. The students were excited, curious, and ready to learn. They studied hard to enter medical school for years and wanted to begin learning how to become doctors.

(②) The professor stood in front of them and said, “To become good doctors, you need two things. First, you must learn to observe carefully. Second, unpleasant things shouldn’t make you feel bad.”

There was a bowl of dirty and smelly water on the desk. It looked terrible, and the smell filled the room. The professor said, “Watch what I do, and next do the same.”

[A], he put one finger into the water and then put a finger into his mouth.

The students watched it and followed him. All the students put their fingers into the smelly water and then put the same fingers into their mouths. ③ They didn’t like the taste, but tried to hide how they felt.

[B] the students finished, the professor smiled and said, “You all were brave. You didn’t show how bad it tasted. But you missed something. I put my index finger in the water and my middle finger in my mouth.”

The students were surprised and laughed. They learned an important lesson from this clever trick: good observation is not just looking. It means carefully noticing the real things that happen, not the things you only imagine.

次の対話文を読んで、あとの要約文の ① ～ ③ に入る英単語を答えなさい。

Yuki : Wow, those cars are really cool! What kinds of cars are they, Josh?

Josh : Oh, hi, Yuki. They are cars for the future.

Yuki : Their designs are so stylish, aren't they?

Josh : Absolutely! According to this article, every car will be an EV by 2050.

Yuki : What's an "EV"?

Josh : It means "electric vehicle." A "vehicle" is something you ride, such as a car or a bicycle. EVs have been around for a while, but you'll see more of them on the street soon.

Yuki : I see. So, an EV doesn't need gas and it's eco-friendly.

Josh : Exactly.

Yuki : Well, I can't see any seat for the driver. Where is it?

Josh : This car doesn't need a driver. AI controls the car, and it can drive itself. The inside looks like a living room. When you go somewhere in the car, you will be able to enjoy eating or sleeping.

Yuki : That sounds fantastic! I think that's especially good for elderly people. Even if they become too old to drive a car, they will be able to go traveling or shopping.

Josh : Right. My grandparents will like that.

Yuki : I'm sure that high school students will like the car, too. They can go to school in it even if they can't drive.

Josh : So, people will not always need to learn how to drive.

Yuki : Well, maybe in the future.

(注) gas = ガソリン

<要約文>

Yuki and Josh are talking about cars of the future. By 2050 all cars will be powered by (①), and they will be able to move (②) a driver because they are controlled by AI. The inside of these cars looks like a living room, so people can relax, eat, or even sleep while they are going somewhere by car. Yuki thinks they will be very helpful, and she also says that students can go to (③) even if they haven't learned to drive.
